April 2013

Spring?

The notices for this year's AGM on 25 April should have dropped into your letterboxes – and I hope that you will come to the meeting. We've invited John Barradell, the new town clerk, to come and speak to us. He seems genuinely interested in residents' views, and we know that he has already asked the Highways department to review the way it conducts consultations with residents over street scene improvements.

Street scene

We know that because of a recent meeting that representatives from the BA and from Gilbert and Ben Jonson house groups together with two common councilmen from Cripplegate had with Steve Presland, the director for Transport and Urban Realm. He wanted to consult residents on what a better consultation process would look like. Steve was very open to the elements of a good consultation process that we put forward. These included consulting early, with more than one option, before critical decisions are made and consultants briefed. We also asked for consultation with English Heritage and the Twentieth Century Society; published timescales, with a shorter time between the end of consultation and implementation; and communication of the results of the process. Steve accepted these and added more member involvement.

The meeting had also arisen because of the furore there has been over the seating at St Giles's Terrace and Ben Jonson Highwalk, which Randall Anderson writes about in his RCC update on page 5. Gilbert House conducted a survey of their residents and had an overwhelming response that the seating that has just been installed should be removed as being unsuitable in design, wrongly placed, and placed too near to Gilbert flats. Steve did not agree to remove the furniture straightaway (because he would need a committee decision to do that) but he agreed to re-run the consultation once the planting had been done and if the views of residents remain against the furniture he would remove it. The planting will be done on St Giles's Terrace, where he also agreed that no seat would be nearer to Gilbert House than had been the case before, but not on Ben Jonson Highwalk, where planting is in limbo because of the issues of water penetration and missing irrigation.

We also made the point – and hope to come back to this in future discussions with Steve's department – that at the outset what most residents wanted was simply refurbishment of these areas and better maintenance. We understand that the whole Barbican Area strategy is under review and we've asked for more information and input into that at the earliest opportunity.

CHAIR'S CORNER

The demolition of St Alphe House is to start shortly

Indeed, we had hoped that an area round the Barbican might be part of the City's bid for money from the London Mayor to improve air quality. It looks as though it won't be, but the City's air quality officer (who spoke at last year's AGM) is hoping that if the bid is successful her team will use it to experiment in a different part of the City with different ways of improving air quality, and those techniques that are successful can then be applied elsewhere in the City, including round the Barbican. These might include things like street washing, dust suppression methods, taxi ranks, green corridors, 20 mph zones.

Concrete

The new furniture at St Giles's Terrace and Ben Jonson Highwalk was one of the subjects that have dominated recent meetings of residents, including those at the election wardnotes; the other is the concrete inspections. The BA is waiting to discuss the question of who pays for the concrete works with the chair of the Barbican Residential Committee – we agreed that this meeting should wait till after the elections.

Our argument is that some of the repairs were to areas of low compaction in the concrete and inadequate coverage of the steel reinforcement; since these were faults in construction that have been there since the buildings were first built and were identified in a report as far back as 1986 and not rectified then, they should have been declared in the leases if the City had wanted the long leaseholders to pay for this element of the repairs.

St Alphe and more

Things are getting busy around the east end of the estate. There's continuing grief from building works at that end of the estate – and not just from Crossrail. Now, it seems, the developers of the St Alphe site (Brookfields) want to start demolishing St Alphe House in April. We didn't hear that from Brookfields, but from the planning committee meeting, so we are chasing them up so we can discuss the deconstruction protocol.

Two other proposals also affect that end of the estate. Amber, the club in City Point, wants to extend its opening on Saturday nights to 4am (currently 2 am). We are trying to find out whether the club envisages a new clientele and will make the point that while the club has generally stuck to its management plan, minicabs waiting in Moor Lane are not part of that plan and we want them to enforce taxi handling better.

The other proposal is a proposed application from the GSMD/Arts Centre to vary the planning condition that requires the new Milton Court GSMD building to be shut to the public from 11 pm at night to 10 am in the morning. This condition was put in specifically to protect residential amenity. But the Arts Centre and the school now want the ability to occasionally keep the building open beyond 11 pm and open it for people attending conferences before 10 am. They want to stay open beyond 11 pm so that they can hold post-concert talks and receptions for sponsors. The residents of Speed and Willoughby, who are opposite the entrance to the school, are opposed to these changes, but are nevertheless engaged in discussions with the chairs of the GSMD and Arts Centre boards. So far the chairs have emphasised that they do not envisage that the GSMD Milton Court building will stay open beyond 11 pm very often and they have agreed to let the public out by the stage door (on the north side of the building) if the numbers are small enough to make that possible. We are awaiting further proposals from them before they make their formal application and seek a licence for the building.

Local plan

The City is reconsulting on its local plan, and the BA put in a response. We suggested that the Barbican and Golden Lane should become a conservation area, since listing alone hasn't protected the area much from encroachment by other developments. Indeed, we think that the plan should acknowledge much more the nature of the Barbican as a cultural as well as a residential area. It contains cultural buildings such as the Arts Centre and the Museum of London, and many visitors come to look at the architecture. I was looking at an early London Transport tube map and noticed that the two stations I use most – Barbican and St Paul's were once called merely "Aldersgate" and "Post Office." So at least London Transport recognises the architecture of the area.

Tackling poor air quality in the City

Air quality has been particularly poor this winter. Since Christmas, there have been five air quality alerts with Moderate to High pollution levels for the City. The air quality monitor in Beech Street recorded 10 days with High levels of particulates and NO₂ pollutants. On 27 February Matthew Pencharz, the Mayor of London's environment adviser, said it would be "sensible" for children to be kept away from playgrounds during smog episodes. Teachers at Golden Lane campus interviewed for LBC suggested this would not be practical. Children from the school have been working with volunteers from Citizen Science to monitor air quality and parents and children interviewed showed a high level of concern about air pollution.

The Mayor of London has set aside a Clean Air Fund of £6m to be spent over 3 years to fund projects to improve air quality. The BA Sustainability group met Elliot Treharne, the GLA's air quality manager to discuss the City's bid for this funding. Boroughs can bid for up to £400,000, which they must match fund – so the City could carry out a substantial project. If successful, the City would use the funding to evaluate the effectiveness of a series of measures for improving air quality in a test area around Fenchurch Street. This area includes the Sir John Cass primary school, Leadenhall Market and Gracechurch Street. A substantive part of the Clean Air Fund money would then be used to roll out the technical solutions proved to work in the Fenchurch Street area to the Beech Street tunnel and adjacent roads. Support from residents will be critical to the success of the bid, which is being put together by the City's air quality officer.

Beech Street PM10 readings in ug/m³ 1 January to 24 March 2013

Euro limit value standard 50ug/m³ in 24 hours. Permitted exceedences 35 per year.

If you are interested in getting involved in the bid, by becoming an air quality champion or participating in a Citizen Science project, please contact Sarah Hudson (ba_sustainability@btinternet.com) or come along to one of our Sustainability Group meetings.

You can save up to £300 on your water bill

Yes it's true. But first...

It may surprise you to know that the average household of 4 people consumes up to 1,350 litres of water/day. Even as a conservative estimate allowing for holidays, that's around 300,000 litres of water per annum. By curious coincidence, the Golden Lane Estate swimming pool also requires 300,000 litres to fill it. So, we are using a swimming pool of water a year!

If that statistic surprises you, even makes you feel slightly guilty, you can do something about it. Save money and feel good at the same time – just ask Thames Water to fit a water meter to help you conserve this precious resource. You can do that from their website: <https://secure.thameswater.co.uk/dynamic/cps/rde/xchg/corp/hs.xsl/15749.htm>

In all probability, Thames Water will be unable to fit a water meter to your particular flat, but not to worry – the intent is there and they will put you on an Assessed Charge. This is calculated as the average of metered water bills in your area for the number of bedrooms and number of occupants in your property. This is likely to be substantially less than you are currently paying. For example, the Assessed Charge for my flat in Gilbert with two occupants was reduced from £507 to £229 a year.

After that nice surprise, I began to think about lowering my consumption to justify the considerable reduction in charges. These are some of the things I now do to save water:

in the kitchen

- * Cook vegetables by microwave, rather than boiling (probably will save power too);
- * Don't pre-wash dirty crockery by running under the tap; so trust the dishwasher more (set on 'Economy', naturally);
- * Don't leave the tap running;
- * Use the residual boiled water in the kettle, rather than tipping it away and refilling with each new use. (To save on energy too, don't keep boiling more water than you need to.)

in the bathroom

- * Choose to shower rather than take a bath;
- * When cleaning my teeth I rinse using a tooth mug;
- * Don't leave the tap running.

in general

- * When cleaning I put half as much water in a bucket compared with what I did before;
- * Water plants at night – they need less water as less will evaporate than during the heat of the day;
- * Lastly, I'm thinking about more efficient plumbing, for example installing a modern flush mechanism with a ½ flush option and a smaller cistern.

One way of making all this easy to remember and to put into practice is: try to imagine the stuff coming out of the tap is a top vintage champagne or the finest malt whisky!

If you want a handy calculator to find out what your water consumption is, have a look at <http://www.csgnetwork.com/waterusagecalc.html>

City Oral History Project

People who live or work in the City of London are being invited to take part in an oral history project based at the new Artizan Street Library. The project aims to promote understanding of local history by sharing stories and experiences. Volunteers are also being sought to help transcribe and collate the reminiscences. The project is being co-ordinated by Community Service Volunteers, and backed by the Corporation.

Benches, Broadband and Beech Street

As ever, the Residents Consultation Committee (RCC) has been busy on a variety of issues. Here is an update on three areas of concern from Randall Anderson.

St Giles Terrace and Ben Jonson Highwalk

The Barbican Association arranged a meeting with Steve Presland, Policy and Performance Director of the Department of the Built Environment and Victor Calister of Street Scenes to discuss the failures of the process that led to the installation of seating and (on St Giles Terrace) planting that has not been well received by many. The results of the meeting were 1) a commitment to develop with the BA a consultation process that would present genuine options rather than steer things towards an already developed plan, 2) a commitment to apply a form of this consultation process to determine whether the new seating and planting should be removed or altered, and 3) a commitment to remove the seating and planting if that was the preference of the consultees.

TV/ Broadband

The selected provider for the new system has determined that it will cost more to install the system than expected. We understand that they will shortly be presenting a proposal to continue to operate the current system in parallel to the new system and install the new system to individual flats only when enhanced services were desired in the flat. This would mean that those who do not desire new services would not have the disruption of a fibre cable being installed in their flat but it does raise several questions that will be addressed by the working party once we receive their proposal. Amongst these are whether installation in a flat at some future time when enhanced service is desired will be free.

Beech Gardens

The main project is being put out to bid now and work on site is expected to begin during July. There have been a variety of reasons for the delays, but the primary one has been the fact that the project has proven to be more complex and expensive than anticipated so has had to repeatedly cycle through the City's project approval process. The BA remains in conversation with the Estate Office concerning reducing the visual impact, particularly the fencing. The City will be retaining a landscape architect to work with the working party in discussing planting alternatives.

The Barbican Tuesday Club

In spite of the miserable weather we have been experiencing the Tuesday afternoon meetings have been well attended.

Our varied programme of speakers started well with a visit by Mark Field, our Member of Parliament. It afforded a chance for us to know something about the man representing us and, in his turn, to get a flavour of the friendliness of Barbican residents. Future subjects include City Sculptures and the Museum of London.

The first outing of the year is to the Charles Dickens House museum, just a short bus ride away. Also we are now planning where we shall go for the early Summer event. We are spoilt for choice with so many National Trust properties and other great houses within reasonable reach. The Lilac Room is buzzing.

A reminder that we meet on Tuesdays 2.45 to 4.00pm in the Lilac Room, 02 level of Seddon House. Incidentally tea and cake costs 50p – what a bargain!

Why not give June Giles a call on 020 7588 1623 for fuller details or just come along. You will be made most welcome.

Visit your Wildlife Garden

On the 8th and 9th of June, on behalf of the Estate Office, volunteers from the Barbican Wildlife Group (the BWG) will be opening our Fann Street Wildlife Garden to the general public for the fifth year in a row as part of London's Open Garden Squares Weekend (OGSW). Over the last four years, we have welcomed more than 1,000 visitors – some in rain but most in sunshine. Many express their delight at the peacefulness and diversity of the garden itself and at finding such a wild oasis in the middle of the City. Last year our Wildlife Garden was awarded a Certificate of Excellence by London in Bloom and was included as one of seven Secret Havens in a double page spread in the Lord Mayor's Show programme.

Every year since 1998, Open Garden Squares has provided opportunities to visit well over 200 gardens across London, many of which are private, like ours, and rarely open to the public.

The Wildlife Garden is always open to residents using your estate key. But we would welcome residents and their friends to visit on this particular weekend – so we can introduce you to and answer any questions you might have on the pond, the cottage garden, the wooded areas and hedges and the wildflower meadow. New this year is a large bed in the sunniest part of the garden dedicated to herbs and plants favoured by bees and butterflies.

Each year we have a very successful sale of plants specially grown by volunteers on their balconies.

We will be delighted to see you that weekend. Full details of hours of opening will be found on BarbicanTalk nearer the opening. But if you have any questions, please contact Paula Tomlinson at paula@johnandpaula.com or on 020 76283657.

Community Orchard in Fann Street

On a cold wet Sunday in February (was there any other sort?) Barbican and Golden Lane residents created a community orchard in Fann Street. Twelve fruit trees were planted in the on-street containers, donated by the City Corporation. Heritage apple trees, including Colonel Vaughan and Lady Sudeley now rub shoulders with plum, quince and damson trees. The orchard should produce a few fruits this autumn and become more productive every year.

Residents planting a quince tree in the Fann Street Community orchard

Capital Growth, a London-based charity that supported the creation of 2,012 new community food growing spaces across London in 2012, provided the funding, together with some additional cash from the City. The 'Fann Street Orchard' is number 1932 and joins the Golden Lane allotments, Fortune Street Park and the Peabody estate community growing spaces.

We will need a team of volunteers to help water (if it ever stops raining), prune and of course harvest! If you would like to help look after the trees please contact Sarah Hudson on cgfriends@btinternet.com.

SECURITY MATTERS

Commissioner
Adrian Leppard

City Police Commissioner sets out policing priorities

I recently met the Commissioner of the City of London Police Force, Adrian Leppard, and took the opportunity to ask if he was interested in preparing an article for this edition. He has kindly produced the following: "I would like to begin this article by thanking you, as residents of the Barbican Estate, for continuing to raise the issues that matter to you with your community police officers. By highlighting your concerns with us you help the City of London Police to address emerging problems.

I am aware that residents of Barbican and Golden Lane recently set priorities at a community partnership meeting. You want us to address the problem of rough sleepers in the area of John Trundle Court and Breton House, along with an issue relating to begging during the evenings in Aldersgate Street, between Long Lane and Carthusian Street. I know that officers are working to achieve this. While overall crime levels in the City of London are among the lowest anywhere there is no room for complacency when it comes to tackling criminality and we are committed to fighting crime at every level.

This year in our Policing Plan we have introduced an additional priority specifically to tackle anti-social behaviour and other criminality associated with the night time economy – which resonates with the priorities you have identified.

This commitment to tackle anti-social behaviour is added to our other priorities which include cutting crime, improving road safety, providing an effective response to public disorder and, of course, protecting the City of London from terrorism. The City of London Police also has national lead force status to protect the City and UK from fraud.

As much as we have an essential role in protecting the City from the threat posed to our security by terrorism and a significant national remit to tackle economic crime, our local duties are no less important.

It is often the case that residents' and workers' priorities are very different from those that impact on businesses – but let me assure you that your issues are treated with the same regard.

In the last 12 months and for the 10th year running the City of London Police has had notable successes in reducing incidents of violent crime and theft. There have also been sizeable reductions in road traffic collisions and we pride ourselves on response times to emergency calls.

These successes have been achieved at a time of great change for policing generally and for the City of London Police specifically. The force has completed a restructuring programme which was required to meet the 20% cut in Government funding. We have reshaped how we do business while maintaining an efficient and responsive police service and it is our plan that you should see no noticeable change in service despite the budget reduction.

This includes the area of Community Policing. While there has been an overall reduction in numbers, the way our policing teams work on the ground has been refocused. Officers and PCSOs now operate in three specific teams – Residential, Street Intervention and Business.

Your Residential team's objectives include tackling anti-social behaviour and other related residential issues, dealing quickly and efficiently with problems that arise and stepping up police patrols in the City's residential areas, including the Barbican.

The change in Community Policing means that as residents you have access to a dedicated team of expert officers supported by teams who have broader knowledge and skills to draw from. I am sure they will continue to maintain the high level of service you rightly expect to receive.

This force's policing mission is simple; to make the City of London safer by upholding the law fairly and firmly, keeping the peace and preventing crime and anti-social behaviour, investigating crime and bringing offenders to justice.

Our policing priorities reflect our ultimate aim – which is to maintain the City of London as a place where residents, workers, visitors and businesses alike feel safe and secure".
